Commencement week at Columbia University will end today with the graduation of 6,050 students.

The degrees will be conferred at an outdoor ceremony on South Court, beginning at 3 P. M. In the event of rain, a more limited ceremony will be held in the New York Cathedral (St. John the Divine).

The commencement address will be given by Dr. Grayson Kirk, president of the university.

The seniors of Columbia College held their annual Class Day program yesterday. The festivities, however, were shortened when rain began to fall during the address of Dr. Lawrence H. Chamberlain, dean of the college.

Later in the afternoon, newly elected members of Phi Beta Kappa, academic honor society, met.

They heard Dr. Philip E. Mosely, director of the university's Russian Institute, urge that the United States abandon its policy of keeping declared Communists out of the country.

"I can think of nothing more upsetting to them than a visit to the United States," he declared. He said that the Communist visitors should be shown the "good and bad" of American life.

"This will have a disrupting effect on their future and, if nothing else, it may lead some of them to be purged," he added.

Speaking of the effect of American policy abroad, Dr. Mosely said that the United States frequently acted in an idealistic way but talked in the "language of cheap realism." He cited protectionist economic restrictions and threats of "massive retaliation" as particularly vexing to America's allies.

Allen W. Dulles, director of the Central Intelligence Agency, will address the Alumni Federation's annual Commencement Day luncheon today. His topic will be "Education in the Communist World." The luncheon will be held in John Jay Hall.

The alumni activities will start at 9:30 A. M. with the meeting of the Alumni Trustee Nominating Committee in Low Memorial Library. Later in the morning, individual classes will meet in Hamilton Hall.

Also during the morning the commissioning ceremonies of Columbia's Naval and Air Force Reserve Officers' Training Corps units will take place.

Commencement Week began on Sunday with a baccalaureate service in St. Paul's Church. It continued last night with Columbia College's senior prom in John Jay Hall.

An addition to this year's graduation exercise will be the awarding of two medals and two prizes.

The Barnard Medal for "meritorious service to science" will go to Merle A. Tuve, director of the Carnegie Institute in Washington. The Butler Medal will be awarded to Carl R. Rogers, Professor of Psychology at the University of Chicago.

For his contributions to art and design, Joseph Floch will receive the Brevoort-Eickemeyer prize for painting. The Alice M. Ditson award, given annually to an American conductor, will be presented to Robert Shaw.
